Volunteering

My father use to be a volunteer firefighter and I use to have to stay at the fire house when he would go on calls. This happened all the time. So I just started to volunteer there when I was around the age of 5. Picking up, cleaning and other things that helped them out, I would try to do. When I became old enough, I started to answer phone calls and take care of other house cleaning work. Soon after that I started to volunteer as a helper for the classes that my father would teach. I would learn before hand of how to do things and come into the class and prove that I could do the same things that they would need to do. Doing simple things, such as tiring an 8-knot against the other students.

In my college career, I joined a social club called Sigma. This is a group of both male and females. We would do things like cleaning up trash, taking kids around for trick-or-treating so it would be safe for them. Also I have worked softball camps for girls from the ages of 6 up to the high schools girls. Only working the batting section of the camp, I got to interact with the girls more and become a role model to some.

I really enjoy when I get free time when I am home because I go to a place called Anthony House. This place is where people who do not have a home or a job and can support themselves. I will help out in the cafeteria, play with the children, clean up the grounds and help build things around the property. I also go through my clothes every summer and give them to the Anthony House because I know that they are in need of newer clothes.
